

Inservice Assignment

The Inservice assignment is an evidence-based presentation or project that is based upon an agreed-upon topic of interest between yourself and the clinical instructor. Some examples include: a patient with a diagnosis that interests you or is new to you, an intervention that may be beneficial to the population you are treating, an outcome measure you are unfamiliar with. The Inservice could also be an assignment that is assigned to you by your clinical instructor, such as a quality improvement project. Your inservice should not only further your knowledge but should also benefit the staff that you are presenting to.

When preparing your Inservice, here are things to consider:

- Choose your presentation format and check which multimedia capabilities your site has available (i.e. PowerPoint, handouts, etc.)
- List your references in APA format
- Consider active participation, handouts, etc.
- Find out how much time you will have to present your Inservice (Please leave at least 5 minutes for Q&A at the end)

Following completion of the inservice presentation, Clinical Instructors will score the assignment on Exxat, and students upload the presentation under the assignment titled "Inservice" on Canvas.
